

Talbert Center Family Practice

Talbert Center Family Practice, one of the Northwest Primary Care clinics, has been caring for the families of the greater Clackamas area for over 15 years. Our patients appreciate and enjoy the holistic approach we bring to their needs and concerns.

As a clinic, we are dedicated to family medicine with five doctors of osteopathy (D.O.) and one medical doctor (M.D.), all of whom provide acute and chronic care for our patients. Our training and emphasis is on recognizing and treating the whole patient, rather than just the part that needs medical attention.

We are privileged to have five D.O.s in addition to our M.D. at Talbert Center Family Practice. Doctors of Osteopathic Medicine practice within a "structure influences function" concept, believing that when a problem exists with one part of the body's structure, function in that area will also be affected. This approach emphasizes the understanding that the body is a collection of parts that may become injured or diseased, and is especially helpful when treating patients with either acute or chronic conditions.

Doctors of osteopathy are also trained in osteopathic manipulative medicine, a system of hands-on techniques that assist in pain alleviation, motion restoration and aiding the body function to be more efficient. Approximately 60% of all D.O.s choose to practice in primary care/family practice and pediatrics.

Talbert Center Family Practice also offers a wide range of routine and urgent care services. The experience and expertise of our clinic professionals help guide our patients through all of their medical, health and wellness needs. Our physicians enjoy privileges at Providence Milwaukie Hospital and Adventist Medical Center, allowing them to provide continuity of care for our patients who are admitted for lengthy hospitalizations.

Our clinic offers an on-site Anticoagulation Clinic that assists in the monitoring and management of dosage adjustment for patients undergoing anti-coagulation therapy. Our nutritionist and diabetes educator, Dr. Jacki Abbott, is available for nutritional counseling and diabetic education for patients of all ages. For the
